

A NEW CREATION

A new century is an opportunity for a new creation. Creation is the highest octave of management. As a creator you have the ability to bring into existence new and preferred realities.

What can you create that will most improve the health and well being of your community? What can you create that will move your organization to its next stage of development? What can you create that will greatly accelerate your soul's unfoldment? Now is the time to ask such questions.

The work of the old century is completed. It cannot be undone. It is an indelible chapter in our developing human history, safely preserved in the memory records of the universe. The new century, by contrast, is a work just beginning. It is our cosmic opportunity to create new directions and explore new possibilities in American healthcare.

As a creator, you can have anything you can imagine. Imagination, or the lack thereof, is the greatest limitation we face as managers. Repeating the mistakes of the past is always the path of least resistance. It takes real determination to break out of the old mold and create something new and better.

What better time to start than now. To help jump start your imagination, consider these questions:

- How could your organization become a destination place where visiting teams learn the process of innovation, demonstration, and replication?

- What signature health services can you develop that enable you to reach a regional and national marketplace?
- How can you provide, more integrated, holistic, patient centered care?
- How can you best incorporate healing architecture in your existing and new buildings?
- What does your community need to do to become the healthiest place to live in the United States?
- How can you access philanthropic dollars to build out your visions?
- What can you do to improve the connectivity of your community, therefore enabling higher levels of interagency collaboration?
- How can you make your organization more harmonious and assure that every person in it is loved and valued?
- What techniques can you learn to build a bridge between your mind and soul thereby incubating your soul potentials?
- What exercises can you do to develop your natural intuitive ability and release your powers of higher consciousness?
- How can you make the next few years the best in your life?

The life you are now experiencing is the life you have created for yourself. No one else caused it. Your internal hologram of consciousness organizes external reality events. Your personal and professional environments are simply the third dimensional solidifications of your fourth dimensional thought forms. Change your thinking and you change your life.

From your internal hologram, a wave of consciousness moves backwards in time to maintain your past and a wave of consciousness moves forward in time to precipitate your future.

Your past is largely a fiction that you maintain and your future is a vision that you will realize. Both are generated by consciousness and both can be altered by consciousness. Such is the power of a creator – awesome indeed!